When BAMPFA presented our ambitious feminist art survey New Time last year, it gave us all a welcome opportunity to reflect on the important role that museums can play in reshaping a historical narrative that too often overlooks the contributions of women artists and filmmakers. That’s a responsibility we take seriously at BAMPFA, and it’s why we’ve been proud in recent years to present solo exhibitions of remarkable women artists like Sylvia Fein, Barbara Stauffacher Solomon, and Luchita Hurtado, who have continued to work well into their nineties and whose indelible imprint on their respective art movements deserves to be better known. Alison Knowles won’t celebrate her ninetieth birthday for another year, but her career falls very much in this tradition: as the sole female cofounder of the influential art collective Fluxus, Knowles has been pushing avant-garde art practice in exciting new directions for more than half a century. But despite her influence, Knowles has astonishingly never received a comprehensive museum retrospective—until this summer, when BAMPFA will open by Alison Knowles: A Retrospective (1960–2022) on July 20. We hope you will join us for this long-overdue tribute to her six-decade career.

Just up the stairs from our Alison Knowles retrospective, visitors to the Barbro Osher Theater can discover the work of another living female artist who deserves to be a household name: Márta Mészáros, an essential voice in the Hungarian New Wave, whose recently restored films will be unspooling on our screen throughout the summer. An unapologetically feminist filmmaker whose work illuminates the untold stories of women in modern Hungarian society, Mészáros exemplifies BAMPFA’s commitment to amplifying the voices of women in cinema, on both sides of the camera. In a similar spirit, we’re excited to rediscover the films of Kinuyo Tanaka, one of the most beloved movie stars of postwar Japan, who was also an accomplished director in her own right. BAMPFA will screen all six of Tanaka’s extant works as a director this summer, alongside some of her most iconic acting roles, providing our audiences with a fresh perspective on her artistic legacy.

And as always, BAMPFA’s galleries and screens will be enriched this season by work from a younger generation of women artists, including a newly commissioned Art Wall project from Chicago-based Caroline Kent; a multisensory environmental installation from Los Angeles–based Candice Lin; and the evocative steel and silicone sculptures of New York–based Hannah Levy, our latest MATRIX artist. Together with our broader summer program, these artists challenge us to think more expansively—and more inclusively—about contemporary art.

That’s the work we do every day here at BAMPFA, and we’re grateful to you for making it possible.

We join our community in the Bay Area and beyond in mourning the passing of BAMPFA’s former MATRIX and senior curator of exhibitions, Constance Lewallen (1939–2022). The upcoming Fluxus Reverb: Events, Scores, Boxes & More exhibition was conceived by Connie and is dedicated to her as a champion of experimental and conceptual art.

Warmest wishes,
Julie Rodrigues Widholm
DIRECTOR, UC BERKELEY ART MUSEUM AND PACIFIC FILM ARCHIVE
Undoing Time: Art and Histories of Incarceration considers the foundational roots of confinement from philosophical, sociological, theological, and art historical perspectives to better understand the fact that today’s mass incarceration crisis has been centuries in the making. This exhibition traces images from history that contribute to the entrenched cultural beliefs associated with today’s carceral system.

Undoing Time features newly commissioned works of contemporary art based on the analysis of art historical images of incarceration. The twelve contemporary artists in the exhibition—Carolina Aranibar-Fernández, Juan Brener, Raven Chacon, Cannupa Hanska Luger, Ashley Hunt, Sandra de la Loza, Michael Rohd, Paul Rucker, Xaviera Simmons, Stephanie Syjuco, Vincent Valdez, Mario Ybarra Jr.—invest in community collaboration, work in an expansive range of media, and rethink traditional archival research to consider how artistic expression reveals the underlying logics of criminality and correction.

PREVIEW DAYS: AUGUST 25–26
Early access for BAMPFA members and UC Berkeley students, faculty, and staff

OPENING DAY: AUGUST 27
Free museum admission for all

Cannupa Hanska Luger: The ruin of Dominion (And other Gods we never named), 2021; ceramic and fiber installation.

Undoing Time: Art and Histories of Incarceration is generously supported by the Art for Justice Fund, a sponsored project of Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors. Organized by the Arizona State University Art Museum, Tempe, Arizona, it is cocurated by Director Miki Garcia, Curator Emeritus Heather Sealy Lineberry, LACMA-ASU Curatorial Fellow Matthew Villar Miranda, and Senior Curator Julio César Morales, in conversation with artists, scholars, students, activists, community organizers, and educators.

The Berkeley presentation is organized by BAMPFA staff and coordinated by Christina Yang, chief curator, with Claire Frost, curatorial assistant.
Best known as a core member of Fluxus, the avant-garde art group founded in 1962, Alison Knowles has created groundbreaking experiments that have influenced contemporary art and artists for over fifty years. This is the first comprehensive exhibition of her work, spanning the entire breadth of her still-active career, from her intermedia works of the 1960s to participatory and relational art from the 2000s.

Knowles creates poetic works from her extended engagement with ordinary materials, found objects, and everyday life. In 1959, influenced by John Cage, she experimented with chance operations to determine a painting’s composition and made silkscreen-on-canvas works predating those of Robert Rauschenberg and Andy Warhol. She became known for her Fluxus event scores, including Make a Salad and Identical Lunch, which she has performed internationally since the early 1960s. Her major intermedia works include The Big Book (1967), which expanded an artist-made publication into a monumental installation, and the multifaceted House of Dust (1970), a poetry project that produced one of the earliest computer-generated poems.

Before entering the galleries, visitors see “Alison Knowles: Art/Life/Events,” an illustrated timeline that introduces the artist and the overarching trajectory of her career. The first half of the exhibition focuses on her artistic practice from 1960 to the early 1970s, ranging from her early silkscreened painting, Fluxus event scores, and multiples to major intermedia projects. The second part includes Knowles’s diverse range of practices from the 1970s to the present, including sculpture and installations; cyanotypes and mixed media prints; sound compositions and radio works; paper scrolls and flax and bean sculptures; artists’ books, multiples, and publications; and collaborations with other artists. The exhibition is accompanied by a major exhibition catalog published by BAMPFA, the first comprehensive book on Knowles’s work to be published by a museum.
FLUXUS REVERB: EVENTS, SCORES, BOXES & MORE

Considered a forerunner of conceptual art, and inspired by Dada artists (especially Marcel Duchamp) and composer John Cage, Fluxus was an international movement of the 1960s and 1970s that included artists, poets, composers, and designers. Working across disciplines and in a decidedly anti-commercial manner, Fluxus artists staged performance events called Fluxfests, published pamphlets, engaged in mail art, produced Fluxkits, and more.

Fluxus Reverb: Events, Scores, Boxes & More offers viewers an opportunity to see Fluxus materials and many artworks in the form of a box, including numerous Fluxkits by a wide variety of artists. Often interactive, Fluxkits were produced in multiples, with paper labels designed by Fluxus founder George Maciunas, and distributed at very little cost. These mini museums, as they are sometimes called, are an example of how Fluxus artists rejected traditional modes of production and display. Such works owe a debt to Duchamp’s Boîte en valise, originally produced by the artist between 1935 and 1941, when he left Paris for New York ahead of World War II. The boîte (box) contains miniature versions of the artist’s work; Series F (1966) of the Boîte works is on view. Also in the gallery is Fluxus artist Yoko Ono’s Untitled (Everson Catalog Box). The box, which accompanied her 1971 exhibition This Is Not Here, contains multiples by Ono, including parts of paintings made with John Lennon, such as Painting Stepped on by Yoko & John and Painting Slept on by John & Yoko.

At one time or another, Fluxus activities involved many leading avant-garde artists of the late twentieth century. Fluxus Reverb features works drawn from the BAMPFA collection by artists Joseph Beuys, Cage, Alice Hutchins, Alison Knowles, Shigeko Kubota, Nam Jun Paik, Ben Patterson, Ono, Mieko Shiomi, Ben Vautier, and more. It serves as a complement to Knowles’s retrospective, by Alison Knowles, in the adjacent galleries.

This exhibition is dedicated to Constance Lewallen (BAMPFA, 1980–88, 1998–2007).

Los Angeles–based artist Candice Lin (born 1979) creates multisensory environments that investigate the legacies of colonialism, racism, and sexism, often by mapping the trade routes and histories of colonial goods, including sugar, tea, indigo, and cochineal. Drawing from years of material research, Lin has created a new body of work that is grounded in the uncanny sense of isolation yet collective experience that has marked our lives during these pandemic years.

Co-organized by the Walker Art Center and the Carpenter Center for Visual Arts, Candice Lin: Seeping, Rotting, Resting, Weeping is composed of a site-specific installation that responds to each of its gallery sites, including BAMPFA, allowing the work to evolve over the course of its presentation. Anchored by a nomadic tent structure—simultaneously a temporary shelter and a quasi-religious temple—the exhibition includes hand-dyed, drawn, and hand-printed indigo textiles; hand-built ceramic sculptures; plaster and concrete “tactile theaters”; and a video animation that leads visitors through qigong breathing and movement exercises. With cats abounding in the space, from ceramic figures curled up inside the tent to the video’s animated cat demon, the exhibition imagines an existence in which typically neglectful human caretakers of the world are no longer the protagonists. The BAMPFA presentation is accompanied by a specially curated selection of Buddhist works of imagined animal/human/nature configurations chosen by the artist from the museum’s long-term loan collection to live in dialog with her installation.

Edited and with essays by Walker associate curator Victoria Sung and Dan Byers, John R. and Barbara Robinson Family Director, the Carpenter Center’s fully illustrated exhibition catalog documents the artist’s research and studio process and includes a commissioned essay by UC Berkeley professors Julia Bryan-Wilson (History of Art Department) and Mel Y. Chen (Gender and Women’s Studies Department).

Candice Lin: Seeping, Rotting, Resting, Weeping, 2021; hand-printed (katazome) and hand-drawn (tsutsugaki) indigo panels, steel bar, dyed rugs, glazed ceramics, epoxy resin, feathers, block-printed and digitally printed fabric (masks), bells, tassels, variety of small objects; Collection, Walker Art Center, Minneapolis, Justin Smith Purchase Fund, 2022.

Candice Lin: Seeping, Rotting, Resting, Weeping is co-organized by the Walker Art Center and the Carpenter Center for the Visual Arts at Harvard University.

The exhibition is cocurated by Dan Byers, John R. and Barbara Robinson Family Director, Carpenter Center for the Visual Arts, Harvard University, and Victoria Sung, associate curator, Walker Art Center.

The Berkeley presentation is organized by BAMPFA staff and coordinated by Christina Yang, chief curator, and Elaine Yau, associate curator.
HANNAH LEVY

MATRIX 279

AUGUST 10, 2022–JANUARY 8, 2023
NEW EXHIBITION

Hannah Levy’s sculptures of chromed steel and silicone bring together hard and shiny, and soft and squishy textures to explore the visceral tension between bodies and objects. Levy welds the forms herself before they are sent out to be electromagnetically chromed, enacting a process in which tangible labor is obscured by the gleaming power of industry. Working from the languages of industrial design, her objects evade the functionality and ostensible neutrality of that discipline to evoke the fragility, strength, and uncanniness of inhabiting a body.

For her MATRIX 279 presentation, Levy shows a combination of new works produced for the exhibition and recent works made in response to the Mies van der Rohe Modernist architecture of the Arts Club of Chicago. Together, they highlight the recent fetishization of Modernist design and the idealization that shapes our relationship to these objects and spaces as much as the bodies that utilize them. Corsetry details and birdlike claws literally push and pull on snakeskin-patterned silicone to create tenuous skins. The resulting tension unsettles the clean lines of the sculptures’ shiny armlike supports, inserting a feminist critique that exposes the way rigid structures squeeze and stretch anything that doesn’t conform to their ideal.

MATRIX 279: Hannah Levy was conceived by former BAMFPA curator Apsara DiQuinzio. It is organized by BAMFPA staff and coordinated by Claire Frost, curatorial assistant. The MATRIX Program is made possible by a generous endowment gift from Phyllis C. Wattis.

Discover exciting performances in our dramatic space on the night of each full moon. Please note: Seating for Full is limited. Additional tickets required. See bampfa.org for details.

The Gypsy Chronicles
FRIDAY / 6.3.2022 / 7:30 PM
Programmed by Sean Carson
This event was originally scheduled for February.
Oakland native Femi Andrades (FEMI) brings her latest project, “The Gypsy Chronicles,” to our performance space. FEMI is an accomplished international recording artist with over twenty albums, including her debut, Sweet Water Soul, and REVOLUTION with Funk Funk Mob. She has been a staple in the music industry for over a decade, blending the sounds of jazz, soul, punk, funk, hip-hop, and rock into a hybrid style all her own.

Evan Ziporyn
WEDNESDAY / 7.13.22 / 7:30 PM
Programmed by Sarah Cahill
Composer and clarinetist Evan Ziporyn performs on solo and multitracked clarinet and bass clarinet, interpreting works by Donald Fagen, Philip Glass, Jimi Hendrix, Joni Mitchell, Jaco Pastorius, and others. The program centers on two monumental works from the late 1960s: Glass’s long-lost Best out of Three for three clarinets, and Ziporyn’s solo bass clarinet version of Hendrix’s Woodstock Improvisations. The concert also highlights Pop Channel, Ziporyn’s first solo clarinet album in twenty years.

Pamela Z
THURSDAY / 8.11.22 / 7:30 PM
Programmed by Sarah Cahill
International sensation and Rome Prize alumna of UC Berkeley’s History of Art Department, introduces her new book, The Rose: Creation and Community in Jay DeFeo’s Circle. Ferrell examines the creative exchange that developed around The Rose, the monumental painting that San Francisco artist Jay DeFeo (1929–1989) worked on almost exclusively from 1958 to 1966. A book signing will follow.

Splinter Reeds
TUESDAY / 6.14.22 / 7:00 PM
Programmed by Sarah Cahill
Splinter Reeds is the first quintet made up of only reed instruments on the West Coast, showcasing the artistry of five immensely talented Bay Area players: Kyle Bruckmann (oboe), Bill Kalinkos (clarinet), Geoffrey Deibel (saxophone), Jeff Anderle (bass clarinet), and Dana Cetilia, Mario Godoy, and Paula Matthusen. This performance includes new music by composers Laura Cetilia, Mario Godoy, and Paula Matthusen.

GALLERY TALKS, LECTURES & DISCUSSIONS

Book Event: Noah Simblist and Christina Yang on Tania Bruguera and The Francis Effect: Then and Now
SATURDAY / 6.4.22 / 4:00 PM
On the occasion of his new book The Francis Effect, curator, artist, scholar, and educator Noah Simblist joins BAMPFA Chief Curator Christina Yang in conversation about noted Cuban artist/activist Tania Bruguera’s project The Francis Effect (2014–ongoing), in which she requests that the pope grant Vatican City citizenship to all immigrants and refugees. Simblist also discusses his other projects, such as Commonwealth (2020) and Conjunctions and Disjunctions (2022). A book signing will follow the conversation.

Book Event: Elizabeth Ferrell on The Rose: Creation and Community in Jay DeFeo’s Circle
SUNDAY / 6.12.22 / 4:00 PM
Elizabeth Ferrell, associate professor of art history at Arcadia University and an alumna of UC Berkeley’s History of Art Department, introduces her new book, The Rose: Creation and Community in Jay DeFeo’s Circle. Ferrell examines the creative exchange that developed around The Rose, the monumental painting that San Francisco artist Jay DeFeo (1929–1989) worked on almost exclusively from 1958 to 1966. A book signing will follow.

CURATOR’S TALKS

Stephanie Cannizzo and Christina Yang on Fluxus Reverb: Events, Scores, Boxes & More
FRIDAY / 7.22.22 / 12:00 PM
Stephanie Cannizzo, associate curator, and Christina Yang, chief curator, explore the world of Fluxkits—mini museums, as they have sometimes been called, that owe a debt to Marcel Duchamp’s Boîte en valise, which contains miniature versions of his artworks. Their discussion will feature Yoko Ono’s catalog in the form of a box that accompanied Ono’s 1971 exhibition This Is Not Here.

Julio Morales on Undoing Time: Art and Histories of Incarceration
SATURDAY / 8.27.22 / 2:00 PM
Julio Morales, senior curator at the Arizona State University Art Museum, who organized Undoing Time, offers insights into the work of twelve contemporary artists who aim to uncover untold stories and bring to light historical underpinnings, building a revelatory narrative of incarceration.

Community Day

by Alison Knowles: A Retrospective (1960–2022)

SATURDAY / 7.23.22

Curator’s Talk: Karen Moss and Hannah B Higgins 1:00 PM

Karen Moss, curator of by Alison Knowles, together with Fluxus scholar Hannah B Higgins, offers an immersive tour of the exhibition. The two art historians highlight specific works and series, addressing the trajectory of Knowles’s art from her earliest paintings and involvement with Fluxus in the 1960s to her large-scale intermedia projects and experiments across disciplines from the 1970s to the present. Moss, whose doctoral dissertation was about the artist’s performances and pedagogy, has worked with Knowles on previous exhibitions. Higgins, a noted authority on Fluxus, is the daughter of Knowles and artist Dick Higgins and thus in a unique position to share insights about her mother’s art and life.

Celebration Red 2:30 PM

Visitors are invited to bring an everyday red object to the museum to contribute to Alison Knowles’s participatory, interactive installation Celebration Red. In 1962 Knowles started to write poetic scores for Fluxus events—instructions to perform simple actions and gestures, often in combination with simple found objects. Her original score Celebrate every red thing asks participants to choose a single red object and place it on a red grid on the floor. Later called An Homage to Every Red Thing, it asks us to pay attention to the ordinary objects we usually overlook and to delight in seeing all these singular items come together in an installation that, as the title suggests, is a playful celebration of all red things.

Objects will not be returned—they will be donated or discarded.

ARTISTS’ TALKS

The Artist’s Eye: Curatorial Gallery Talk

SUNDAY / 6.19.22 / 3:00 PM

The Artist’s Eye highlights the artistic vision of four established Bay Area artists by inviting them to curate works from BAMPFA’s collections. Hear from one of these artists, Tammy Rae Carland, about her selections and how they resonate with her own work.

MATRiX 279: Hannah Levy

WEDNESDAY / 8.10.22 / 6:00 PM

The artist addresses her sculptural work on view in the exhibition, discussing the varied dimensions and issues it embodies, including the relationship between objects and bodies, Modernist design, and the uncanny.

Art Lab Collage Party

SUNDAY / 6.5.22 / 12:00 PM

Join local artists and educators Amy Bergstein and Alayna Tinney for some collaborative collage time in the Art Lab. We will work together to create one large-scale, communal piece, which will be cut into card-size pieces to make a set of postcard prints using the Art Lab’s risograph machine. Each participant will receive a set of postcards printed from the design. All ages are welcome!

Cyanotype Workshop with Jenny Rosenberg

SUNDAY / 7.31.22 / 1:00 PM

Join local artist and educator Jenny Rosenberg to make cyanotype postcards. Simple chemicals, paper, sunshine, and water are all that is needed to create photographic blueprints known as cyanotypes. Explore the process using the provided materials to render selected forms in white silhouettes against a blue background, or feel free to bring in small objects you would like to capture in this fun photographic form. The blueprints will be made on postcards, which participants can take home to enjoy or share as mail art.

Collaborative Comics with Carolyn Yagjian

SUNDAY / 8.21.22 / 1:00 PM

Join us in the Art Lab for a collaborative comic workshop hosted by multimedia and video artist Caro Yagjian and independent comic publisher Scott Longo (Sonatina Comics). Use a variety of collage and drawing materials provided by the Art Lab to create a collaborative comic with the simple “exquisite corpse” technique. Working with others to create a comic can take the pressure out of coming up with a storyline. This free-form exercise optimizes group imagination and takes the fear out of art making by forcing you to let go of results.

Fabric Doll Workshop

SATURDAY / 7.2.22 / 1:00 PM

This workshop is intended for ages 7 and older. Space is limited; RSVP online

Join Art Lab teaching artist Micaela Martinez Saavedra and learn the process for making small cloth dolls with needle and thread. Participants will use simple sewing techniques and decorate their rag dolls to their liking with paint and beads. All ideas are welcome, from animals to mini self-portraits.
BLACK LIFE

Sasha Kelley
SATURDAY / 8.27.22 / 12:00–4:00 PM

Join us for a special event organized by Oakland-based multidisciplinary artist Sasha Kelley as a culmination of her engagement as the Black Life series's summer resident artist. In her artistic practice, Kelley uses photography, place making, and social practice to examine topics of Black identity, the creative practice of women of color, cooperative communities, and divine archetypes. She currently hosts and produces Club Proxii, an immersive music and interview show streaming out of Oakland’s Lower Grand Radio. Kelley asks how a contemporary archive can be experienced and felt, exploring the answer through digital and physical articulations of Club Proxii’s community.

PERFORMANCE

Sister Spit: A Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Reunion Showcase
FRIDAY / 8.12.22 / 6:00 PM

Acclaimed filmmaker Sini Anderson (The Punk Singer) and award-winning author Michelle Tea (Against Memoir) reunite as the original cocreators of the long-running queer, feminist performance tour Sister Spit. To celebrate Sister Spit’s twenty-fifth anniversary, Anderson and Tea bring together a dizzying array of contemporary queer and feminist literary talent for a cabaret-style event. Featured performers include Lynn Breedlove, Nicole J. Georges, Beth Lisick, Denne Michelle, Kamala Puligandla, Brontez Purnell, and Vivek Shraya.

FIVE TABLES

Five Tables is a monthly event coinciding with First Free Thursdays organized by the BAMPFA staff, and periodically by the Student Committee. Using unique themes to draw artworks from the BAMPFA collection, Five Tables allows visitors to get an up-close look at an extraordinary range of works on paper. Drop by the Florence Helzel Works on Paper Study Center for a curated behind-the-scenes experience.

Five Tables of Dance
THURSDAY / 6.2.22 / 4:00–7:00 PM

Take a look at the expressive body across cultures. On view are jazzy watercolors of Isadora Duncan by Abraham Walkowitz and gauzy photographs of her daughter, Irma, by Arnold Genthe; bold ukiyo-e prints of entertainers and Kabuki actors, such as Lion Dancer and Young Woman and Boy by Suzuki Harunobu; an 1889 cabaret poster by Jules Chéret, Nouveau cirque, La Foire de Seville; Arthur Murphy’s Ballet Dancers #5; an early eighteenth-century Indian drawing depicting Rajput entertainers; and more.

Five Tables of Portraits, Part II
THURSDAY / 7.7.22 / 4:00–7:00 PM

Delve deeper into the Study Center’s collections in this second showing of portraits of the noble, notable, and notorious, including Albrecht Dürer’s emblematic study of the philosopher Erasmus, a rare Indian miniature of the executed sufi sage Sarmad the Mystic, a 1959 woodcut of the great American contralto Marian Anderson, a selection from Veronica De Jesus’s ten-year series of posthumous drawings of artists and other inspirations, and more.

Five Tables of Birds
THURSDAY / 8.4.22 / 4:00–7:00 PM

No binoculars required. Bird-watching has never been easier than a hike to the lower-level Study Center: falcons perch on the wrists of Mughal emperors or join an ogre and boy under an umbrella in a Japanese hanging scroll; sparrows flit through a tree in a Baitusu ink painting and are meticulously rendered in mineral pigments on a decorated Indian page; eagles command attention on a composition book containing James Castle’s self-taught drawings, represent the enemy in a World War I French propaganda poster, and majestically share a branch in Lin Liang’s fifteen-/sixteenth-century masterpiece; and more.

GUIDED TOURS

The Artist’s Eye
THURSDAY / 6.2.22 / 1:15 PM

Patricia Lessard offers ASL interpretation for a graduate student–led tour of the exhibition. All visitors are welcome.

WEDNESDAY / 6.29.22 / 12:15 PM

THURSDAY / 7.7.22 / 1:15 PM

WEDNESDAY / 7.13.22 / 12:15 PM

1. Black Life: Sasha Kelley, 8.27.22
2. Sister Spit, 8.12.22
3. Five Tables of Dance (Abraham Walkowitz: Isadora Duncan), 6.2.22
4. Five Tables of Portraits, Part II (Veronica De Jesus: Chick Strand/Lucian Freud/Juliette Couly/George Tooker), 7.7.22

SECOND SATURDAYS FOR FAMILIES
In BAMPFA’s galleries, Art Lab, and Reading Room
Admission is free for kids 18 and under and for one adult per child 13 and under.

GALLERY + STUDIO
For ages 6–12 with accompanying adult(s)
This two-part workshop integrates an interactive gallery tour with a related art project; the session lasts about an hour and a half. Please arrive promptly to secure your place, as space is limited.

The Sounds Among Us
SATURDAY / 6.11.22 / 11:30 AM
Workshop led by Marcela Florez
Orchestrate a picture of sounds inspired by Caroline Kent’s Art Wall and the architectural features of BAMPFA’s building. Start with shapes; then introduce color and movement as you explore the artist’s multilayered composition of darker “undertones” and brighter “overtones” in oil pastels.

The Artist’s Eye: Nature’s Vibrations
SATURDAY / 7.9.22 / 11:30 AM
Workshop led by Kim Bennett
When BAMPFA invited artist John Zurier to choose his favorite artworks from the museum’s collection for the exhibition The Artist’s Eye, he filled the gallery with Chinese and Japanese paintings that feel—but don’t look—like his own. Explore these artworks and Zurier’s paintings with artist Kim Bennett, observing movements in nature and variations in season and light. Then use watercolors to express your own experiences of nature.

ROUNDTABLE READING
Recommended for ages 8 and up with accompanying adult(s)
At Roundtable Reading, young readers read aloud to one another from the opening pages of a good book for about an hour. Children who participate at the event will receive a copy of the book to continue reading at home. No advance sign-up needed; just show up at 2:00 ready to read!

New from Here by Kelly Yang
SATURDAY / 6.11.22 / 2:00 PM
Reading led by Becca Todd, former district library coordinator, Berkeley Unified School District
Ten-year-old Knox Wei-Evans doesn’t want to move to California without his dad and his dog, but his parents decide that leaving Hong Kong will keep him and his siblings safe from the new virus spreading across China and Europe. Almost overnight, Knox, his mom, and his two siblings are living in a small house in San Francisco. At school, he struggles with being the new kid and experiences the hostility directed toward Asians and Asian Americans that is skyrocketing during the pandemic. Can Knox keep his family together during a pandemic and find a sense of belonging in his new country?

Beezus and Ramona by Beverly Cleary
SATURDAY / 7.9.22 / 2:00 PM
Reading led by Linda Artel, former BAMPFA children’s film festival programmer
Nine-year-old Beezus Quimby has her hands full with her little sister, Ramona. Whether she’s taking one bite out of each apple in the box or secretly inviting fifteen other four-year-olds to the house for a party, Ramona is always making trouble and getting all the attention. Old enough to be expected to take responsibility for her little sister, yet young enough to be mortified by every embarrassing situation she gets them into, Beezus is constantly struggling with her mixed-up feelings about the exasperating Ramona!

Second Saturdays is taking a break in August. We’ll see you again in September!

Family Day
A DAY OF ART & FILM
SUNDAY / 6.12.22 / 11:00 AM–3:00 PM
Free Admission!
11 AM–2 PM  Art Making and Family-Friendly Gallery Tours
2 PM  Family Matinee: The Gold Rush
Make art inspired by BAMPFA exhibitions. Explore the museum’s galleries with mini tours featuring interactive activities.

Stay for a free screening of Charlie Chaplin’s The Gold Rush, featuring a hapless prospector in the frozen north and some of Chaplin’s most memorable nuggets of comedy, including scenes of our hero reduced to eating his own boot, leading a pair of rolls in a graceful soft-shoe dance, and trying to escape a cabin teetering on the brink of an abyss. This 1942 version of the film is narrated and scored by Chaplin.

Free tickets for the film screening will be available at the will-call table beginning at 1:00 PM.
“Since my first film I have attempted in a very deliberate and stubborn way to portray women capable of making independent decisions,” wrote acclaimed Hungarian filmmaker Mártá Mészáros, who at age ninety is the subject of this major retrospective featuring new digital restorations of her films. Few filmmakers (even other women filmmakers) have put women front and center—their reality, their relationships, their struggles—in the way Mészáros has. Whether in examinations of a new generation coming of age in the 1960s (The Girl; Don’t Cry, Pretty Girls!), two generations learning to work together in the 1970s (The Two of Them; Adoption), or historical dramas of the past (the Diary films), “Mészáros seems to have asked her cameraman to capture for her and help her memorize a world of women,” marvels our 1986 film note.

Born in 1931 in Budapest, Mészáros trained at Moscow’s famed VGIK film school before getting her start in newsreels and documentaries in both Romania and Hungary, many of which focused on women workers. Her own remarkable story—she was an orphan whose father, the avant-garde sculptor László Mészáros, and mother died during the Stalinist purges—is dramatized in her much-praised, semi-autobiographical Diary series. “Returning time and again to themes of motherhood, nontraditional families, relationships between women, and the traumas of 20th century Hungarian history,” wrote Janus Films, “she has created a cohesive body of work that is uniquely attuned to the social, economic, and political forces that govern the lives of her complex, typically working class female characters.” No matter the era or setting, though, her characters are all united in their search for a true life and against the lie that “everything is fine” coming from their peers or elders, or from society as a whole. Indeed, as one of Mészáros’s characters heartbreakingly cries out, “Nothing is fine!”

FRIDAY / 6.3.22

THE GIRL
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1968)
(Eltávozott nap). Forget James Dean, Alain Delon, or Marlon Brando; Mészáros’s feature debut introduces viewers to a young female rebel without a cause. Real-life Hungarian rock singer Kati Kovács stars as an orphaned woman in the big city: wasting her days amidst the clutter of a weaving factory and the catcalls of random men, she decides to seek out her birth mother in the countryside. “This institution makes me sick,” she declares after storming out of one sanctimonious speech, always moving onward, pausing with some grasping men, ignoring others, but never staying for long. Prefiguring feminist and punk protagonists of the next decade, The Girl is a revelation. JASON SANDERS

SUNDAY / 6.5.22

BINDING SENTIMENTS
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1969)
(Holdudvar). A recently widowed woman embarks on a battle of wills with her son and his girlfriend in Mészáros’s icy portrait of the maternal ties that turn to chains. The wealthy, newly widowed Edit attempts to refuse her husband’s life insurance settlement, which isn’t the news that her son wants to hear; chalkling it up to “hysteria,” he promptly abducts her and plops her into the family’s countryside villa under the watchful eye of his girlfriend (Kati Kovács, The Girl). A Bergman-esque confrontation between the two women follows, but—as in many Mészáros films—it’s not the female gaze that the protagonist must escape, but the male. JASON SANDERS

Written by Mészáros. Photographed by János Kende. With Mari Töröcsik, Kati Kovács, Lajos Balázsovits, Gáspár Jancsó. (82 mins, In Hungarian with English subtitles, B&W, DCP, From Janus Films)

FRIDAY / 6.10.22

DON’T CRY, PRETTY GIRLS!
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1970)
(Szép lányok, ne sírjatok). Mészáros’s third feature seems her most weightless, an almost plotless caper through the Hungarian psychedelic-folk “New Beat” underground that merges Iron Curtain industrial realism with A Hard Day’s Night fancy. Documenting the dreamless workdays of factory life, along with the hopeful promise of rock concerts, Mészáros uses Czech New Wave icon Jaroslava Schallerová (Valerie and Her Week of Wonders) as a totem and narrative guide, her every languorous movement a cue to the film’s rhythm and mood. Amidst the rockers (including such famed bands as Metro, Omega, and Syrisk), though, Mészáros’s frame is focused on all the “pretty girls” looking for different lives to lead. JASON SANDERS

WEDNESDAY / 6.15.22

RIDDANCE
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1973)
(Szabad lélegzet). An early scene of women putting on makeup zeroes in on the theme of Riddance, one of Mészáros’s most biting examinations of unequal social constructs and facades. A young weaver in a textile mill falls for an upper-class college boy and, for a time, passes herself off as a student; soon she tells him the truth, but what do they tell his parents? And at what point does a lie end and integrity begin? This is one of Mészáros’s most documentary-like films, with poignant glimpses of women at work, at play, and—in one scene that stands out for its calm—finally alone and cleansed. JASON SANDERS

ADOPTION
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1975)
(Örökbefogadás). Winner of the Golden Bear (Best Film) at the 1975 Berlin Film Festival, Adoption opened up new ground for East and Central European filmmaking; here, finally, was a serious film about women, made by a woman, that tackled subjects otherwise taboo in cinema. Using a precise, observational aesthetic (pseudorealism), Mészáros centers the relationship of two women of different generations and means: Kata, a middle-aged bourgeois who seeks a child with her married lover, and Anna, a tough teenager. Addressing love, marriage, family, and intimacy in a way barely seen before—utterly shorn of romanticism or sentimentality—Adoption turned Mészáros into a worldwide auteur. JASON SANDERS

DIARY FOR MY LOVERS
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1987)
(Napló szerelmeimnek, a.k.a. Diary for My Loves). The second installment of Mészáros’s acclaimed Diary series is arguably its most searing—and timely—exposing how history and reality can be erased through political manipulation. Now in film school in Moscow, Juli finds that her newsreels expose too much discontent for her censors. “You must create a new reality,” they remind her, one where contentment is the only norm. Intertwining Juli’s personal artistic awakening and Janos’s continuing activism with the history of Hungary—from the defeat of Stalin to the beginning of the 1956 Hungarian Uprising—this second Diary showcases how history affects the individual, as well as how an individual may affect history. JASON SANDERS

DIARY FOR MY MOTHER AND FATHER
MÁRTA MÉSZÁROS (HUNGARY, 1990)
(Napló apámnak, anyámnak). The final piece of Mészáros’s epic Diary series finds our heroes, Juli and Janos, in the aftermath of the 1956 Hungarian Uprising, witnessing political repression and a Russian propaganda machine that turns revolutionaries into “fascists” and Soviet aggression into Hungarian. (“Are Moscow newspapers lying?”) Juli’s Russian friends ask incredulously.) Mészáros weaves historical documentary materials into the fictional narrative, crystallizing an entire nation’s struggle into one family’s journey: “As such, it serves to commemorate and remember those who had, and continue to have, the courage to speak the truth in the face of certain death, punishment and deprivation” (Catherine Portuges, Screen Memories). JASON SANDERS

“If we lose one film, that’s one less title on that list of films ever made. So the work of preserving film under the leadership of Martin Scorsese and the foundation, and some of the great institutions that the foundation works with is very essential work.”  FRANCIS FORD COPPOLA

“Preserving films, in terms of the legacy of the future, is probably the most important thing we can do. We spend a great deal of time, energy, money, trying to preserve antiquities, trying to preserve other art forms, and I think it’s equally important that we spend some of our resources to preserve films.”  GEORGE LUCAS

“I am constantly amazed at how modern and innovative many of these defining films were as filmmaking evolved as an art form. Not just the better known ‘classics’, but the films and filmmakers whose work was buried by censor, neglect, or prejudice.”  LYNN RANSAY

Founded in 1990 by Martin Scorsese and a group of leading film directors, including George Lucas, Steven Spielberg, Francis Ford Coppola, and others, The Film Foundation and its World Cinema Project (created in 2007) are a driving force dedicated to protecting and preserving motion picture history. As a nonprofit organization, The Film Foundation, working in partnership with archives and studios, has helped to restore over 925 films, and the World Cinema Project has restored 47 films from Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe, Central America, and the Middle East, ensuring that these films are preserved, seen, and shared.

Over the years, BAMPFA has featured many of the restorations funded in part by The Film Foundation, and we have benefitted from its support for our own preservation projects in the areas of avant-garde, documentary, and independent film. We take this occasion to showcase an impressive range of world cinema that has been preserved thanks to a concerted effort over more than thirty years.

SHADOWS
JOHN CASSAVETES (US, 1959) RESTORED 35MM PRINT

Cassavetes’s first film stripped the American screen of a treasured possession—narrative closure—and left the ambivalence of real emotions. The film owes a debt to Italian neorealism, but with its poetry of immediacy, its riffs by jazz musician Charles Mingus, and its racial theme already evolved into an existentialism of marginality, Shadows was quintessentially American. Cassavetes centers his tale on three Black Manhattanites—Leila (Leila Goldoni) and her brothers, Ben (Ben Carruthers) and Hugh (Hugh Hudr). To say that each suffers an identity crisis, to use the lingo of the day, is to minimize the breadth of their time (the 1920s): perfection of the cut, perfection of the stitchng, perfection of the fabric . . . Ernest Lubitsch was, in our memory, the man whose oeuvre will someday symbolize this perfection, this flawless style that was the distinctive feature of this art” (Henri Langlois).

ENAMORADA
EMILIO FERNÁNDEZ (MEXICO, 1946) DIGITAL RESTORATION

(Woman in Love, a.k.a. In Love). In this truly extraordinary film, “Maria Félix is most radiant as the rich man’s daughter sought after by a revolutionary general played by Pedro Armendáriz. The passions of political idealism and romantic love come head to head in this sweeping saga set against the Mexican Revolution of Juarez. Loosely adapted from Shakespeare’s The Taming of the Shew (and Count Lucanor by Juan Manuel), the film displays some of Gabriel Figueroa’s finest work. Magnificent Churriguereque cathedrals are juxtaposed with a revolutionary atmosphere and provide the backdrop for plenty of romantic fireworks between Armendáriz and Félix” (Michael Donnelly).

TAIPEI STORY
EDWARD YANG (TAIWAN, 1985) DIGITAL RESTORATION

(Ching-mei Chu-ma, a.k.a. Qing mei zhu ma). The collapsing relationship between two urban professionals forms the basis of Yang’s breakthrough feature. Friends since childhood and now lovers, businesswoman Shu-chien (pop star Tsai Chin) and ex-baseball player Lon (acclaimed director Hou Hsiao-hsien) wander through a vibrant mid-1980s Taipei, the film’s reflective atmosphere and period music that, even for the uninitiated, works its extraordinary magic.

THE TREE OF WOODEN CLOGS
ERMANNO OLMI (ITALY, 1978)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

(L’albero degli zoccoli). Winner of the Palme d’Or at Cannes, The Tree of Wooden Clogs is the epic made personal, a cinema of majesty constructed from minutiae. Set in northern Italy in the early 1900s, the film follows three families of farmers and their interactions with their community, their wealthy landlord, and the land itself. Sprawling, politicized peasant epics were the rage in 1970s European cinema, but here economic oppression and daily toil are not exploited for narrative spectacle, but rather quietly felt and keenly observed. Nearly every scene documents the movement and rhythm of labor. JASON SANDERS

WANDA
BARBARA LODEN (US, 1970)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

Cited by Jonathan Rosenbaum as one of the one hundred greatest American films ever made, Loden’s neorealist gem centers on her brilliant performance as a rural Pennsylvanian housewife who embarks upon a flight to nowhere, traveling through an American landscape of decrepit factories, two-lane wastelands, and ratty motels. Draggled seemingly by the wind into a relationship with a small-time crook (Michael Higgins), Loden’s Wanda floats through her life as if a witness to it, a view of desperation filtered through a tinted windshield. Loden’s creative partner in the production was cinematographer/editor Nicholas T. Proferes, who, crucially, emerged from the then-vital tradition of cinema verité.

THE OLIVE TREES OF JUSTICE
JAMES BLUE (FRANCE, 1962)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

(Prisioneros de la tierra, a.k.a. Prisoners of the Earth). A passionate tropical noir that weaves its love triangle around greed, exploitation, and class struggle during the birth of contemporary Latin America, Prisoners of the Earth has been acclaimed as one of the greatest Argentine films. Set in the jungle province of Misiones in 1915, as its wildness is turned into profit by exploited plantation laborers, the film follows a proud worker, a ruthless foreman, and the woman torn between them. This restoration brings new life into every nightmarish close-up, powerful folk song, and descent into delirium in this classic of Argentina’s “social-folkloric” genre. JASON SANDERS

BADOU BOY
DJIBRIL DIOP MAMBÉTY (SENEGAL, 1970)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

Mambéty’s short works foretold the exuberant creativity of his subsequent feature Touki Bouki (1973). Transferring his experience in experimental theater to cinematic innovation, in Badou Boy, Mambéty presents little stories on the screen, interweaving them with others on the soundtrack. The film revolves around a punk kid in Dakar, Senegal’s capital. The humor and conniving characters sometimes employ slapstick, with the filmmaker doubling as an actor in one Chaplinesque scene. No chance is missed to mock authority.

Written by Mambéty. Photographed by Baidy Sow. With Lamine Ba, Al Demba Ciss, Christoph Colombe, Aziz Diop Mambéty. (56 mins, In French and Wolof with English subtitles, Color, DCP, From Cineteca di Bologna)

PRECEDED BY CONTRAS’ CITY (City of Contrasts) (Djibril Diop Mambéty, Senegal, 1969). Mambéty’s first film, a tour of Dakar, “sensitively, imaginatively, and puckishly captures the series of contrasts that would define the tumultuous social and ideological climate that would explode in Senegal in 1968” (Documenta Madrid). VITTORIO DE SETA’S SHORT FILMS
DIGITAL RESTORATIONS

After completing his film My Voyage to Italy, Martin Scorsese was given an unexpected gift of several documentaries by De Seta. Each was about ten minutes long and in color, and most were shot in stunning CinemaScope. The short films had concise but poetic titles, and they depicted with gravity traditional culture as it still persisted in postwar Sicily. De Seta’s artful works distinguished themselves from contemporary ethnography by privileging the voice of his much-admired subjects, letting their words and labors tell their stories. He focused on the details of craft, the sanctity of communal rites, and the fragile but revered place of man in nature.

I KNOW WHERE I’M GOING!
EMERIC PRESSBURNER, MICHAEL POWELL (UK, 1945)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

Powell and Pressburger’s most romantic, lyrical film sets a love affair and an emotional awakening against the vast beauty of Scotland’s Hebrides Islands. A young British woman en route to marry her wealthy boss becomes stranded by a storm and finds herself falling under the spell of the landscape and an attentive young Scotsman. Shot on location, filled with mysticism and sensuality, the film stands as “one of the finest of all screen romances” (Elliot Stein, Village Voice). “I reached the point of thinking there were no more masterpieces to discover, until I saw I Know Where I’m Going!” (Martin Scorsese). XIAO WU
JIA ZHANGKE (CHINA/HONG KONG, 1997)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

(Pickpocket). Fresh from the Beijing Film Academy, Jia turned to the dirt streets of his hometown, Fenyang, for his feature debut, a portrait of China in economic transition and of those who can only watch as they’re left behind. More inclined toward a slow stroll sideways than a great leap forward, the small-time, undermotivated pickpocket Xiao Wu (Wang Hongwei) isn’t keeping up as even dirt-poor Fenyang starts striving for economic success. Ramshackle shops are being demolished, the city’s cracking down on street criminals like Xiao Wu, the local bar girl seems unattainable, and even his old prison buddy has become a “model entrepreneur.” JASON SANDERS

AL MOMIA
SHADI ABD EL SALAM (EGYPT, 1969)  DIGITAL RESTORATION

(The Night of Counting the Years, a.k.a. The Mummy). A detective story, historical drama, and sociological critique in one, Al Momia has one of cinema’s most dramatic settings: the towering pyramids, ancient tombs, and desolate sands of the Egyptian desert. Based on a true story, the film takes place in 1881, when a young man discovers his tribe’s secret source of income: raiding, and profiting from, the tombs they have been sworn to protect. Salam frames this essential metaphor with an austere, almost otherworldly serenity, presenting his images as if cinema were both art form and secret ceremony.

PRECEDED BY THE ELOQUENT PEASANT  (Shadi Abdel Salam, Egypt, 1968). Based on one of the many literary texts that has survived from the classical period of Egyptian literature, The Eloquent Peasant is a combination of a morality/folk tale and a poem. (21 mins, Color, DCP, From Cineteca di Bologna)

Total running time: 124 mins
Sometimes a moment from a film sticks with me, and it is what comes to mind when I think of that film. These moments crystallize the experience of the movie; they leave their imprint more than the plotline or even the characters. Indelible Moments, which is presented both in the Barbro Osher Theater and on the outdoor screen, is a selection of films in which a dance scene is what I recall. There is, of course, incredible dancing in musicals, but the dance scenes featured here come from films that are not musicals, from comedies to dramas, as well as films that are structured like a dance. In La ronde, for example, the camera’s movements are choreographed, and Jacques Tati in Playtime “turns the very acts of seeing and hearing into a form of dance.”

Memorable dance moments cross genres, nationalities, time periods; the camera can dance, the mise-en-scène can be choreographed, the editing provides rhythm. Do the Right Thing opens with a dance. Beau travail closes with one. I like an element of surprise in a film, when something arises that I didn’t know what moves you, too.

I’ll be at many of the programs of Indelible Moments, sometimes with an additional selected clip or two. I invite you to think about dance scenes that are memorable to you. I want to know what moves you, too.

CASQUE D’OR
JACQUES BECKER (FRANCE, 1952)
INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer
Edith Kramer was senior film curator and Pacific Film Archive director from 1983 until her retirement in 2005.
LIVE MUSIC Bruce Loeb on piano for Pass the Gravy
With a fluidity that almost defies narrative plotting, Becker unfolds a tale of love doomed by its setting, the Paris demimonde at the turn of the century. A young Simone Signoret is sensual and sassy as the gigolette Marie, who abandons her gangster mec for an honest carpenter, Manda (Serge Reggiani). Becker calls up the spirit of Auguste Renoir to create a setting for the lovers’ meeting and for a brief lifetime of happiness in scenes of heart-stopping sensuality. With her “golden helmet” (casque d’or) of hair, Signoret glows; Reggiani’s impassiveness is all the more moving for his ability to fuse with her.

VIVRE SA VIE
JEAN-LUC GODARD (FRANCE, 1962)
(My Life to Live). Vivre sa vie tells of Nana (Anna Karina), a naive shopgirl, at the brief, flickering moment when she takes responsibility for her life. Because she is unwilling to sell herself, Nana takes to the streets, becoming a prostitute and a student of human emotions. Brechtian in its use of twelve dispassionately announced tableaux—the ninth including “perhaps the saddest ‘happy’ dance scene in cinema” (Ian Davies)—Vivre sa vie is also intensely personal, like the act of prostitution itself. Nana’s crucible is Godard’s existential epiphany, as Nana struggles to see, and say, things as they are, bravely concluding, “All is good.”

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE
JOHN FORD (US, 1946)
INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer
“John Ford’s first film after his World War II service has been rightly called ‘the perfect example of the classic Western’ (Alan Lovell, The Western). The tale of Wyatt Earp in Tombstone was already familiar from at least five previous sound films when Ford cast a restrained Henry Fonda in the title role and a brooding Victor Mature as Doc Holliday. This version is a preliminary cut screened for a preview audience. Although it’s not a ‘director’s cut,’ it’s closer to Ford’s intentions” (Scott Simmon). Wyatt and Clementine’s “dance is the turning point of the movie, and marks the end of the Old West” (Roger Ebert).
Written by Sam Hellman, Winston Miller, based on the book Wyatt Earp, Frontier Marshal by Stuart N. Lake. Photographed by Joe MacDonald. With Henry Fonda, Cathy Downs, Victor Mature, Walter Brennan. (103 mins, B&W, 35mm, From UCLA Film & Television Archive, permission Criterion Pictures)
NEW YORK TIMES

“The visually spellbinding movie depicts [the French Foreign Legion’s] rigorous drills and rituals as ecstatic rites of purification and the embodiment of an impenetrable masculine mystique. . . . Not to be missed.”

NEW YORK TIMES

(Good Work). A story of French Legionnaires isolated in a blisteringly beautiful African setting, Beau travail evokes Camus’s The Stranger as much as it does Melville’s Billy Budd, on which it is abstractly based. This is the Foreign Legion of the 1990s, superfluous to anything but its almost spiritual rituals of loyalty and rigor. The rigor plays out in dancelike exercises and in simple activities like the pressing of a uniform into elegant creases. But loyalty, as in Melville, is a complex of suppressed eroticism and violence, as Sgt. Galoup (Denis Lavant) indulges a paranoid, irrational hatred for a beautiful young recruit, Sentain (Grégoire Colin).

JACQUES TATI (FRANCE/ITALY, 1967)

INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer

NEW 35MM BAMPFA COLLECTION PRINT

INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer

Playtime is an apotheosis of modern design as both subject matter and technique. In his version of 1960s Paris, Tati envisions the city as a terrarium, a realm of glassy reflections where the distinction between interior and exterior is often not seen, only heard. (As always, his manipulation of sound is extraordinary.) Everything is at right angles, except Tati as M. Hulot, whose ordinariness makes him conspicuous. The International Style metropolis that the film observes with wonder was in fact an enormous set into which the filmmaker sunk every resource he had; a box-office failure, Playtime bankrupted Tati, though it is now recognized as his masterpiece. JULIET CLARK

INTRODUCTION Ruth Gebreyesus

Ruth Gebreyesus, a writer and producer based in the Bay Area, is currently cocurator of Black Life, a multidisciplinary art and film series at BAMPFA.

Burnett’s Killer of Sheep evokes the everyday trials, fragile pleasures, and tenacious humor of blue-collar African Americans in 1970s Watts. Burnett made the film on a minuscule budget, with a mostly nonprofessional cast, combining keen on-the-street observation with a carefully crafted script. The episodic plot centers on the character of Stan (Henry Gayle Sanders), a slaughterhouse worker mired in exhaustion and disconnected from his wife, his children, and himself. Stan and his neighbors struggle just to get by, let alone get ahead. Only the kids, leaping from roof to roof, seem to achieve a mobility that eludes their elders. JULIET CLARK

DAMNATION

BELA TARR (HUNGARY, 1988)

NEW 4K RESTORATION BY HUNGARIAN NATIONAL FILM INSTITUTE

INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer

Six years prior to Satantango, the first collaboration between what would become cinema’s holy trinity of melancholia—director Tarr, composer Mihály Vig, and writer László Krasznahorkai—Damnation boasts a norris plotline of marital infidelity, scheming lovers, smuggling scams, and murder. Yet the plot is barely noticeable amid an atmosphere of stasis and decay so meticulously rendered that it almost oozes from the screen. Existing in a realm of rain-lashed nights, deserted countrysides, and windowless rooms, Damnation was Tarr’s first movement away from traditional narrative, toward a cinema that holds the space around the plot in almost mystical awe, in which atmosphere, not language, is what defines and confines. JASON SANDERS

CHANTAL AKERMAN (BELGIUM/FRANCE, 1982)

NEW 35MM BAMPFA COLLECTION PRINT

INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer

(All Night Long). This lovely film might be Akerman’s postmodernist version of a city symphony, its beautifully paced rhythms and variations somehow “outside” the melody. It looks in on dozens of mini dramas that take place during one warm, muggy, thundery night in Brussels. The camera follows the characters through the city Akerman knows best. The subject is love—the impulse that thrusts two beings together, the awkwardness and exhilaration of contact, the desires, the disappointments. There are many actors but no characters, and fewer than one hundred words are spoken. Cahiers du cinéma called it a “comédie sentimentale treated as a choreographed dance.” **

LA RONDE
MAX OPHULS (FRANCE, 1950) BAMPFA COLLECTION

INTRODUCTION Edith Kramer

Set in the Vienna of the waltz, this exquisite and witty film describes love’s ceaseless roundabout, starting with a prostitute (Simone Signoret), who loves a soldier (Serge Reggiani), who leaves her for a chambermaid (Simone Simon), who . . . etc., etc., until the story comes back to the prostitute. Here “the normal narrow view of movie stories, always going forward towards destiny and resolution, is abandoned in favor of the more mocking designs of hazard, obliqueness, and digression, a dance in which the dancers do not hear the beat but in which they revert helplessly to where they began, older and no wiser” (David Thomson).

Written by Ophuls, Jacques Natanson, based on the play Der Reigen by Arthur Schnitzler. Photographed by Christian Maras. With Anton Walbrook, Simone Signoret, Serge Reggiani, Simone Simon. (97 mins, In French with English subtitles, B&W, 35mm, BAMPFA collection, permission Janus Films)

JEAN-LUC GODARD (FRANCE, 1964)

“[Godard’s] most charming and, arguably, influential film: a free-associative meditation on the gangster genre that revealed a new way of framing our dreams and our reality.”

DAVID EDELSTEIN, NEW YORK MAGAZINE

Would-be tough guys Franz (Sami Frey) and Arthur (Claude Brasseur) have little better to do than drive around Paris and act out scenes from B movies. But when they team up with wide-eyed Odile (Anna Karina) to plot a burglary, they stumble into the gap between playacting and reality. Godard said, “It is not the people who are important, but the atmosphere between them.” The atmosphere arises not only from the actors’ interplay—their dance in a café and their sprint through the Louvre are among the most memorable and joyous moments in Godard’s cinema—but also from Raoul Coutard’s exquisitely bleak cinematography and Michel Legrand’s jaunty, melancholy score. DO THE RIGHT THING
SPIKE LEE (US, 1989)

“Do the Right Thing is bright and brazen, and it moves with a distinctive jangling glide.” J. Hoberman wrote for the Village Voice. “Set on a single block in the heart of Brooklyn on the hottest Saturday of the summer, it offers the funniest, most stylized, most visceral New York street scene this side of Scorseseland.” In its portrayal of simmering racial tensions escalating toward tragedy, the film is, in Hoberman’s words, “a daring mix of naturalism and allegory, agitprop and psychodrama.” Lee recalled: “Rosie Perez dancing. People were not ready for the opening of that film. That opening is a part of cinematic history.”

FOREVER KINUYO TANAKA

One of the most recognizable actors of world cinema, Kinuyo Tanaka (1909–1977) had a career that spanned half a century and hundreds of roles. Celebrated for her indelible performances in films by iconic directors—including Kenji Mizoguchi, Mikio Naruse, and Yasujiro Ozu—Tanaka also made a significant contribution to the golden age of Japanese cinema as a director. The depth and intelligence she radiated in her acting roles are also present in the complex characterizations in her own films. Tanaka directed six movies between 1953 and 1962, all of which relate in some way to women working to achieve better lives, respect, agency, and/or self-realization in the face of discrimination, illness, or oppression. New 4K digital restorations make it possible, for the first time in decades, to see all of Tanaka’s films on the big screen. Ranging in style and genre, they include the dramas Love Letter, Girls of the Night, and Forever a Woman; the comedy The Moon Has Risen; the biopic The Wandering Princess; and the historical epic Love Under the Crucifix. These films represent the lives of men and women across the social spectrum. In addition to films that Tanaka directed, this series includes six films representative of the scope of her acting career: Ozu’s silent-era Dragnet Girl; Mizoguchi’s The Life of Oharu; and rare imported 35mm film prints of Yasujiro Ozu and Kenji Mizoguchi’s Shunkinsho: Okoto to Sasuke. Heinosuke Gosho’s Where Chimneys Are Seen, Naruse’s Flowing, and Let’s Go, Grandma!, a charming discovery from BAMPFA’s collection.

LOVE LETTER
KINUYO TANAKA (JAPAN, 1953) 4K DIGITAL RESTORATION
(Koibumi). Tanaka’s impressive directorial debut—made with support and encouragement from mentors Mikio Naruse and Yasujiro Ozu—was based on a popular novel by Fumio Niwa and set just after the end of the American occupation of Japan. Love Letter focuses on a repatriated naval officer, Reikichi (Masayuki Mori), secretly searching for his lost first love in Tokyo. Reikichi finds work with a friend who writes letters for Japanese women asking for support from their American GI boyfriends. Through the prejudiced eyes of the male protagonist, Tanaka paints a portrait of the life of women compelled to engage in transactional affairs. KATE MACKAY

LIVE MUSIC
Judith Rosenberg on piano
(Hijosen no onna). The last of Ozu’s several excursions into the world of American-style crime melodrama in the early 1930s centers on the efforts of a gangster’s moll to get herself and her lover/accomplice out of their murky world and into “a decent life.” This film is full of fascinating detail, an atmospheric lighting style, and some nicely observed small roles. Kinuyo Tanaka tackled an extraordinary variety of parts in the 1930s, and she brings a wide range of moods and emotions to this role, giving the film a center and force that it might not have possessed otherwise.

WHERE CHIMNEYS ARE SEEN
HEINOSUKE GOSHO (JAPAN, 1953) IMPORTED 35MM PRINT

(Entotsu no mieru basho). Gosho’s most celebrated film in both Japan and the West, Where Chimneys Are Seen is perhaps the most compelling example of his concern for, and insights into, the everyday lives of lower-middle-class people. Based on Rinzo Shina’s novel of the absurd, the film depicts the lives of two couples against the backdrop of Tokyo’s growing industrialization during the 1950s. Ken Uehara and Kinuyo Tanaka portray a tabi/salesman and his lonely wife, whose lives—along with those of their two timidly amorous lodgers—are disrupted, and finally transformed, by the appearance of an abandoned baby on their tenement doorstep.

THE LIFE OF OHARU
KENJI MIZOGUCHI (JAPAN, 1952)

It chronicles the decline of a beautiful court lady who is exiled, sold by her father as a courtesan, and gradually stripped of social respectability. Mizoguchi was said to have aestheticized women’s suffering, but the same cannot be said for Kinuyo Tanaka. Through all of Oharu’s degradations and transformations, she is the wick in the candle, keeping this epic tale of a woman being punished for her sexuality painfully on topic. JUDY BLOCH

Chronicling the end of Fumiko’s marriage, her frustrated desire for her mentor, and her battle with cancer, along with the successful publication of her poems, Tanaka depicts the poet’s progress from resigned submission to intellectual self-assurance, sexual fulfillment, and professional success as she edges ever closer to death. Kinuyo Tanaka plays the titular Grandma, who, after selling her Hokkaido property, is apparently flush with cash but newly homeless. Her grown children take turns hosting her, making extravagant performances of filial devotion with an eye to potential profit. Making use of a catalog of wacky visual effects, bracketed by gratuitous ham-fisted fight scenes, and costarring pop singer Hideki Saijo, the film is balanced by Tanaka’s nuanced performance, which delivers a denunciation of hypocrisy and greed. FROM THE FRONT PAGE TO THE FRONT LINES:
THE ESSENTIAL SAM FULLER

"To watch a Fuller film is to be immediately pushed, face first into the hypocrisies and criminal fictions that make up the American Myth."
— Ginger Varney, LA WEEKLY

In his astonishing autobiography, Samuel Fuller (1911-1977) recounted his early career trajectory from New York City paperboy to Hollywood screenwriter. Along the way, he learned effective, concise storytelling by reporting on crime stories, riots, and executions. In the midst of the Great Depression, he headed west, filing stories about the hardscrabble existence of the people he met along the way and arriving in San Francisco in time to cover the 1934 general strike. Eventually, Fuller made his way to Hollywood, where he worked as a scriptwriter until 1941, when, at the age of twenty-nine, he enlisted in the infantry, keen to cover what he called "the biggest crime story of the century" from the front lines.

After the war, Fuller distilled his experiences and applied his storytelling skills to directing war movies, Westerns, and crime dramas. His stripped-down B movie style—Fuller preferred a curtailed budget to limited creative control—is evocative of compelling reportage, every shot and every cut deployed for maximum impact. Always on the side of the underdog, his films seek to confront prejudice and inequity head-on, chronicling the grit, resilience, and soulful struggle of misfits, foot soldiers, petty criminals, detectives, and reporters to survive tough breaks, moral misgivings, or psychological trauma. The Essential Sam Fuller consists of ten of the finest films in Fuller’s influential oeuvre, including Pickup on South Street, film noir perfection; The Crimson Kimono, a gripping policier; and The Big Red One, Fuller’s semi-autobiographical World War II epic.

PICKUP ON SOUTH STREET
SAMUEL FULLER (US, 1953)  ARCHIVAL 35MM PRINT

In one of the greatest film noirs of all time, Fuller takes aim “at the idiocy of the Cold War climate of the fifties,” managing to irk Herbert Hoover and leftist French critics with “a movie about small time crooks . . . struggling to survive . . . abiding by their own unwritten code of ethics.” Candy (Jean Peters), pickpocket Skip (Richard Widmark), and Moe (Thelma Ritter) are honest criminals who get caught between the cops and a Communist plot. The sublime scenes of Skip plying his trade are recognizable inspiration for Robert Bresson in Pickpocket (1959).

THE STEEL HELMET
SAMUEL FULLER (US, 1951)  ARCHIVAL 35MM PRINT

Just as the Korean conflict was escalating, Fuller set about making this grim film about an American patrol lost in the woods. A gruff veteran, Sergeant Zack (Gene Evans), is the sole survivor of a North Korean ambush. Bound and crawling through a field of corpses, he is freed by Short Round, a South Korean orphan. The two begin a dangerous trek back to secured territory. Along the way, they accumulate a motley assortment of GI stragglers. Fuller’s disdain for war creeps into every characterization, but it is Sergeant Zack—gritty, emotionless, almost bestial in his lack of sentiment—who calibrates the film’s cynicism.

PARK ROW
SAMUEL FULLER (US, 1952) 35MM PRINT

For Fuller, Park Row was “the story of my heart,” embodying all the love, hate, action, and emotion he associated with the press. Set in 1886, it is the tale of two rival newspapers, the muckraking Star and the Globe, started by idealistic journalist/crusader Phineas Mitchell (Gene Evans). The film is a history in miniature of the emergence of modern journalism, with Mitchell combining all the great newspaper editors of the period, but mostly reflecting Joseph Pulitzer. Park Row is about freedom of the press and its early perversions, about invention as the mother of creativity, and the making of news.

HOUSE OF BAMBOO
SAMUEL FULLER (US, 1955) ARCHIVAL 35MM PRINT

Fuller combines two favorite topics, crime and GIs, with this gangster film involving crooked ex-soldiers in occupied Japan. Surly military cop Robert Stack goes undercover to infiltrate the cartel, led by the suavely psychotic Robert Ryan, and falls for the Japanese widow of a slain gangster. In the first postwar Hollywood film shot in Japan, astonishing CinemaScope images of Tokyo street life illuminate the backdrop of a new war, one between violent mobsters and vicious cops. The narrative quickly eliminates any moral ascendency of cops over robbers, as generalized American thuggery runs riot amid a landscape of racial and cultural difference.

In THE CRIMSON KIMONO, Fuller uses Los Angeles's Little Tokyo as the backdrop for a sympathetic portrayal of interracial romance imbedded in a police melodrama about the murder of a nightclub stripper. Two detectives, one white and one Japanese American, fall in love with an artist whom they meet during the investigation. Competition brings out neuroses born from racial stress and cultural ambivalence, which Fuller examines head-on and reinforces by using location shooting, including a chase down Little Tokyo's streets. Fuller's characters are ambivalent, but the director celebrates both diversity and racial unity in a rare moment of optimism.

As a teenager, petty thief Tolly Devlin sees his father savagely beaten to death in a dark alley, and payback becomes his life's pursuit. In Fuller's purest film noir, starkly photographed by Hal Mohr in deep shadows with occasionally ricocheting cameras, Cliff Robertson's Devlin is a brutishly single-minded protagonist. Doomed by his revenge motive, he is an amoral hood through and through: his substitute mother cleans his wounds and tries to keep him straight, but he still eyes the combination lock on her safe. In Fuller's noir universe, there's no redemption for the pathologically obsessed.

Fuller's tabloid sensibilities propelled his most florid tale, starring Constance Towers as a prostitute who descends on Anytown, USA, in an effort to go straight. The Naked Kiss careens wildly from double entendre–laced melodrama to stirring morality play, Fuller's sharp dialog and black humor bridging the impossible gaps between genres. Towers's Kelly keeps a straight face as she effortlessly goes from hooker to pediatric orthopedist, even as her dark past threatens to consume her and her love affair with the town's richest man reveals the true meaning of the "naked kiss."

"A heroic effort by critic Richard Schickel to reconstruct... Fuller's most ambitious feature—a semi-autobiographical account of his own fighting unit during World War II, severely truncated by distributors when first released (in 1980). This isn't a director's cut, but it's 50 minutes longer than the original release, with 15 previously missing scenes and 23 extensions of existing scenes supplied from surviving footage, with Fuller's script and notes used as guidelines. This multifaceted, earthy, and philosophical reflection on war runs the gamut from realism to surrealism... as it follows Fuller's combat experience from North Africa to Sicily, France, Belgium, Germany, and Czechoslovakia" (Jonathan Rosenbaum, Chicago Reader).
